ing available technology while photographing California landscape.

In the years following hurricanes Katrina and Rita, Bill made a commitment to locate and photograph 100 of the oldest member trees in the Louisiana Live Oak Society. Bill was saddened to see the damage that the hurricanes had on the longstanding oaks, and felt an obligation to preserve their existence for years to come through his photography. His ultimate goal of this effort is to raise awareness for the importance of human protection of these historic trees which are gentle icons of Southern culture.
